The Province of Mendoza is Argentina's most prestigious wine growing region, where South America's most revered wines have been produced for nearly 300 years. Experts consider this area as great as some of Europe's best wine regions. Adjacent to the Andes Mountain Range, many vineyards are at 1,700-meter elevations! The contrast between cool mountain slopes and the warm Andean plain defines Argentine wines.

Black Elk Chardonnay represents the "New World" style of white wine making. Fresh, crisp and distinctive flavors with slight, if any, oak barrel contact. Enjoy it slightly chilled or as a perfect food partner!
